Notes on Technology Planning Toolkit Format

- The document is color-coded by its three components. The color bars along the right or left margins will bleed to the edge of the page, when printed professionally. We are exploring the idea of creating a tab for each of the three major components to facilitate ease of use. The title pages for each component would be printed on a tab divider.
- The layout for the document is set up as 5 columns. While the sample text is now mostly shown in a two column format, the 5-column layout will allow flexibility for the addition of graphics. For example, the glossary is shown as a single column.
- There are some issues with text spacing inherent in the software program that we are working to fix to improve spacing between words or reduce excessive gaps.
